

WIND-SWEPT FIRES LEVEL TWO HOMES

CLENDENEN AND SHELL HOMES BURN

One Occurs in Circleville-Twp and the Other Near Grange Hall

BOTH DESTROYED

Former Is Saturday the Other Sunday Morn

Flames, swept by strong winds, destroyed two Pickaway-co homes over the weekend with loss estimated between $13,000 and $15,000. The home of Edward Clendenen, on the Frank Heffner farm in Circleville-twp, besides several out-buildings were burned to the ground and the home of Frank Shell, one-half mile west of Grange Hall, Monroe-twp was also destroyed. Fortunately no one was injured.

CAUSED BY SPARKS

The fire at the Clendenen home began at about 3 p. m. Saturday and is thought to have been caused by sparks from a brush pile thrown against a woodshed. When the flames began to burn the shed several buckets of water were thrown on the building in an effort to extinguish the blaze but the efforts were of no avail. The flames, fanned by the high wind, swept to the smokehouse and from there to one end of the residence.

The local fire department was called at that time, but before aid could be sent to the home the flames were beyond control. Firemen, after fruitlessly throwing water on the house, gave up this task and bent their efforts to save a garage near by.

FRUIT, MEAT BURNED

The house was completely destroyed. Between 200 and 300 cans of fruit in the cellar, all bed clothing and goods in the second story of the 9-roomed residence and a large quantity of meat in the smokehouse were burned. Household furniture on the first floor was saved.

Part of the loss is covered by insurance. The fire department remained at the home until 5:30 p. m. The blaze at the Shell home is thought to have been caused by an overheated flue or sparks from a fire ignited by Mr. Shell at 6 a. m. Sunday. Mr. Shell and his son, Kenneth, had kindled the fire before going to the barn to feed the stock.

DAUGHTER AWAKENED

The fire was discovered by Miss Ada Shell who was awakened from her sleep by smoke which quickly filled the residence. She awakened her mother and both fled from the home.

Neighbors rushed to the house when notified of the fire but the flames had gained great headway. The house burned completely to the ground. Furniture on the first floor was saved but all bed goods and upstairs furniture was destroyed.

The family is now staying at the home of Harry Shell, a son. Part of the loss is thought to be covered by insurance.

The admiral would answer no questions as to his movements since yesterday when he disappeared. He would not comment upon the continued absence of the chief of the three negotiators, John Hugh Curtis, ship builder.

Curtis left here early Sunday morning and that night Burrage revealed he was away on a mission in connection with the negotiation.

HAIRSTON DECISION TO BE TUESDAY AT 9 A. M.

Judge Adkins to Sentence 'Dump John' After He Hears Motion for New Trial for Arthur Little Tuesday Morning

John 'Dump' Hairston, 27, negro, who has been a state's witness in each of the five murder trials connected with the murder of John Kidney, will learn his fate shortly after 9 a. m. Tuesday, according to an announcement Monday by Judge Joseph W. Adkins.

Hairston was tried two weeks ago without a jury, the court hearing all testimony. Judge Adkins' decision will be in writing. TO HEAR MOTION Judge Adkins also stated that he will hear a motion for a new trial for Arthur Little Tuesday morning. The decision in Hairston's case will probably be withheld until the motion is heard. It is expected a new trial will be refused and a date set for Little's electrocution, the fourth life to be taken for the murder of the aged farmer-blacksmith.

The motion for a new trial for Little will be argued by his attorney, Harry B. Weaver, with E. L. Crist, prosecutor, and Max C. Seyfert, Jr., assistant, representing the state.

DECISION DIFFICULT Just what Judge Adkins' verdict will be in the Hairston case is a matter not easy to guess. The colored man was the first to confess the murder and has testified against each of the others connected with it. He has admitted being at the house the night of the crime but has denied being inside the residence.

IDENTIFY MAN IN BANK THEFT

Oscar J. Smith, 28, Caught in Washington C. H. After Blanchester Robbery.

WILMINGTON, O., April 4.—Oscar J. Smith, 28, Pittsburgh and Columbus suspect in the bold $15,000 Blanchester bank robbery staged late Saturday, was to be arraigned here today.

Convinced he is the man who, single-handed, herded six bank officials and employees in a vault and escaped in a stolen car which he later wrecked while trying to evade a posse, authorities undertook to find the remainder of the missing money.

MONEY IS FOUND Although approximately $15,000 was said to have been taken from the bank, suit cases which Smith carried when he was arrested at Washington C. H. contained only $8237, police said.

Two pistols also were found in the suit cases.

Police partially based their belief of the man's guilt upon a statement by Wilbur Potts of Columbus, that Smith is the man who rented an automobile at a Columbus agency Wednesday and failed to return it.

The car which was wrecked during Smith's race with the posse was identified by Potts as the missing one. It was partially destroyed by fire which resulted from the accident during the race with police.

Bankers who were in the bank when the hold-up was staged also were said to have identified Smith as the robber.

Village Schools Without Water

Mayor Webb Ruled That Schools Cannot Have Water Until Bill Is Paid.

BULLETIN JACKSON, O., April 4.—Water service was restored today at Wellston's four school buildings. Mayor Webb, who ordered the water supply to the school buildings shut off because the school board owed $2,000 for water service, reversed his stand when he was shown a state law and court ruling that exempted the school authorities from payment to the municipal plant.

JACKSON, O., April 4.—School buildings in the village of Wellston near here were without water supply today.

Mayor Thomas E. Webb, storm center of Wellston politics for more than two years, ordered the water supply shut off in the school buildings, asserting that the school board must pay for its water before the service is resumed. Webb's action, it was claimed, was in reprisal for an ordinance passed by the village council recently over his opposition. The ordinance required that water service be discontinued to all persons who failed to pay their bills promptly.

Dungan Petition Given Approval

Chairmen and Clerks of District Boards of Election Admit Tardy Paper NAME IS ON BALLOT

Krinn Does Not Need to File Petition

Though the petition of Miss Jemima Dungan, 22, Mill-st, Democratic candidate for state comptroller, did not reach the offices of the Ross-co board until the morning after the deadline for filing had been passed, her name will appear on the ballots of Ross-co at the May 10 primary.

Considerable controversy resulted and the matter was not settled until the copy for the ballots was sent to the printer.

The Dungan petition together with that of T. D. Krinn for presidential elector was declared not valid by Walter S. Barrett, clerk of the Ross-co board.

RESULTED IN TIE The matter was taken up by the Ross-co election board and a vote of 2 to 2 resulted. Garrett S. Claypool and Allen Scott, Democrats, voting to admit them and Charles F. Capple and William T. Rardin, Republicans, voting to reject them.

When the matter was referred to the office of the secretary of state the board was notified that the matter would be considered a protest and it was suggested that Clerk Barrett call a meeting of various boards in the district to vote on the 'protest'. The counties effected include Pickaway, Ross, Fairfield, Hocking and Perry.

It has been learned that Barrett got in touch with various county chairmen and clerks in the district and that the majority voted to permit Miss Dungan's candidacy to stand. Mr. Krinn's petition has been disregarded because it is not necessary that he be voted upon at the primary. Presidential electors are chosen at state conventions. Mr. Krinn had been informed that he must file a petition.

HONOR TRIAL BEGINS TODAY

Mrs. Fortescue, Lieut. Massie, Enlisted Men Face Honolulu Court Today.

HONOLULU, T. H., April 4.—Four Americans accused of having taken the law into their own hands to avenge a woman's honor were to come before the bar of justice today.

The defendants, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, prominent socially on the mainland, her son-in-law, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, young officer of the United States navy, and two naval enlisted men, E. J. Lord, and Albert S. Jones, stand charge of the second degree murder of Joseph Kahahawai.

With four others, Kahahawai, a half-caste, was suspected of having brutally attacked Mrs. Fortescue's daughter, Mrs. Thalia Massie. The five were tried but the case ended with a hung jury. Kahahawai was shot to death Jan. 15. His body was found in Mrs. Fortescue's automobile as it sped toward the ocean.

Police and naval guards were ready to hold back thousands expected to jam the beautiful streets near the ancient 'Hall of the Chiefs' where the trial will be held. The interest of the curious ran almost as high in seeing Clarence Darrow, grizzled veteran who heads the defense as it did in glimpsing the four accused Americans.

PAROLE NUNGESTER

Alvin 'Boss' Nungester, who assaulted Officer Tom McManamy Feb. 27 when the policeman attempted to place him under arrest for intoxication, was paroled from the Columbus workhouse Monday.

Nungester was sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse which he has served, was fined $100 and costs for intoxication and $200 and costs for resisting an officer by Mayor B. T. Hedges.

The man paid $100 of the fine and was released from the workhouse Monday on a parole notice signed by Mayor Hedges. Sheriff Charles Radcliff, Prosecuting Attorney E. L. Crist and the county commissioners.

ROOSEVELT'S PLEA DENIED BY GOVERNOR

White Says He Will Decline Any Offer to Run for Vice-Presidency

BACKED BY STATE

Effort to Select Ohioan Is Blocked

COLUMBUS, O., April 4.—All possibility of a political "understanding" between Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York and Governor George White of Ohio by which the latter would receive the Democratic nomination for vice president was blasted today by Governor White.

"I am not a candidate for the vice presidential nomination," the governor said.

COULDN'T ACCEPT

"I would not be in a position to accept such a proffer if it should be presented to me because such action would in my judgment be breaking faith with former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker.

"In view of the harmony program involved in the selection of delegates and alternates to the Democratic National convention from Ohio I could not agree to such a proposal."

The governor referred to an agreement among Democratic leaders that the Ohio votes will be cast for White for the nomination as long as he has a possibility of being nominated. If he should be eliminated for this contest Ohio's votes would then be transferred to Baker, former Governor James M. Cox, United States Senator Robert J. Bulkley or some other Ohioan.

TO OFFER POST

Reports from Washington recently stated Roosevelt's friends were offering to halt the "Stop Roosevelt" movement by offering White the vice presidential nomination if he will back Roosevelt for first place on the ticket.

POLICE CATCH BANK ROBBER

Donald Loftus, 29, Confesses Robberies Throughout the Middle West.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Lured into a police trap through his excessive fondness for feminine charms, a debonair young fashion-plate sat in a jail cell here today, calmly recounting the story of a career which may stamp him as America's most spectacular bank robber.

Donald Loftus, only 29 years old, submitted willingly to questioning and confessed, according to police, that he executed 13 bank robberies single-handed within the past three years. Another bank raid, he said, was carried out with the aid of three accomplices.

DENIES MURDER

The suave Lothario, however, stubbornly denied that he killed two California policemen.

"I never used partners, except once," he said. "And I never killed anybody."

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Three marriage licenses were granted in probate court Saturday by Judge E. A. Brown.

They were to: Harold T. Dumm, 23, Circleville meat cutter and Geneva M. Morris, 21, Circleville Rev. C. H. Eichinger.

Borman Werlman, 32, Clearcreek-twp. Fairfield-co. farmer, and Cordelia Hiatt, 23, Talliton, Rev. P. A. Harlan, New Plymouth.

Rule Of Capone Shocks Solons

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The rule of Al Capone over the underworld, as revealed today by the Senate Judiciary Committee, is a shocking revelation. The committee, in its report on the nomination of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson of Chicago to the circuit court, "Repeal prohibition," said Senator Bingham (R) of Connecticut, leader of the senate, "and there will be no more Capones."

"There is no doubt," added Senator Metcalf (R) of Rhode Island, "that if we eliminated prohibition, that if we eliminated prohibition, gangs like that of Al Capone's could not achieve the power they

Quaker City to Welcome Gotham's 'Lady Higher Up'

Saint-Gaudens' Famous Diana, Once a Graceful Part of New York's Skyline, to Find Home in Philadelphia Museum. Her Lack of Clothes Brings Opposition From Moralists.

REPAIRING 'DIANA' THE OLD MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

After looking down on the changing parade of life for over thirty years from atop the old Madison Square Garden in New York, the beautiful statue of Diana is to leave the city that had grown to love her and take up her permanent abode in the Pennsylvania Museum of Art at Philadelphia. The graceful nymph, designed by the renowned sculptor, Augustus Saint-Gaudens, as a gesture of friendship to Stanford White, who designed the old Garden, has been in storage since the famous arena was demolished in 1925. Since then many plans have been proposed to find her a home in New York, but none ever bore fruit. Once, she was almost given to New York University, but variety authorities were unable to raise funds for a suitable pedestal. Another proposal was that the famous work of Saint-Gaudens should be erected at his country home in Cornish, N. H., but the Saint-Gaudens Memorial Association did not think the location suitable. So the lovely lady is now slated to occupy a prominent place in the new $18,000,000 building of the Philadelphia museum. Still, there seems to be a faint possibility that she may again be disappointed; for there is a movement on foot, headed by the Rev. Mary Hubbard Ellis of Philadelphia, to bar the homeless Diana from the Quaker City. The Rev. Ellis' protest is based on Diana's lack of clothing, so if the poor goddess is banned in Philly there is only one place left for her—a New York night club.

BLAME STATES

The dregs indicated they thought Johnson's sensational disclosures showed the states were not helping to enforce the eighteenth amendment. They were gratified by the government's successful efforts in jailing Capone and many of his lieutenants.

"It is a terrible story," said Senator Norris (R) of Nebraska, a staunch dry. "It is a sad commentary that such a thing could happen in this modern era. I see nothing Congress can do about it, except to encourage the government to prosecute these gangs on whatever charges they can prove in court. Capone was convicted for a comparatively minor offense, but I believe his conviction will put him out of business."

"One thing stands out in this story of Johnson. It is the failure of the state to punish Capone for any of his crimes against state laws. That gangster should have been brought to book a dozen times for his violation of state laws. But the state never caught him. It took the federal government to put him in jail."

PUT IN RECORD

Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, who presided at the hearing before which Johnson testified, said he regarded the revelations as so important, he would put them in the congressional record.

"I want the whole country to read this record," said Borah. "But he declined to discuss the revelation, pending action by the committee."

Johnson's story shocked Congress. He told of Capone's sinister rule over the midwestern underworld. He described Capone's control over liquor, beer, prostitution and gambling. He revealed the enormous profits accruing to gangsters. Then he told of the futile efforts to capture Capone on liquor charges—efforts that failed through terrorism, murder of witnesses, murder of principals, intimidation of authorities and even corruption of police.

Johnson next recited how the federal government stepped in to smash Capone and his gang. First, a special squad of detectives raided his breweries, gambling joints and disorderly houses, for the purpose of destroying a part of Capone's enormous revenue from crime. Slowly a huge web of circumstantial evidence was built around Capone and his gang leaders. Slowly the government caught, convicted and jailed one after another of the Capone lieutenants.

But all this activity failed to get Capone. Johnson said the Capone never acted in person—always through intermediaries. He kept no books. He used no checks. He was always "two or three men removed from the crime." He was shrewd, said Johnson, and his "baffling" espionage system gave him first hand knowledge of every government move.

WOULD GUARD FARM WELLS

One way to ward off disease and so guard the health of the farm family is found in an adequate protection of the farm water supply from dangerous disease producing germs, declares Virgil Overholt, extension specialist in agricultural engineering at the Ohio State University.

No single item, he states, is of more importance to the farmer and his family than a pure water supply. In insuring that such a supply will be free from disease causing organisms, it is essential that every reasonable precaution be taken to prevent contamination.

Some of the common causes of surface contamination are: leaky well covers, ground drainage toward the well, privies and barnyards located too close to the well, shallow dug wells, and dug wells without watertight lining. Carelessness in dumping kitchen wastes and other sewage near the well is another frequent cause of danger.

Most of these sources of danger can be corrected if they are recognized in time, Overholt says. In fact, most well developments can be greatly improved with practically no cash outlay. The local county agricultural agent or the college of agriculture, he points out, can supply farmers with well study sheets that will aid in calling attention to things which need improvements in wells.

SHOW ANTIQUES IN N. Y.

NEW YORK—Several million dollars' worth of antiques are on display here at Grand Central Palace, where the Fourth International Antiques Exposition is being held. Several completely paneled rooms are being shown. Some were brought intact from Europe, and others hail from Pennsylvania, Delaware, Massachusetts and similar strongholds of Colonial days.

Speedier Court Play Is Expected

COLUMBUS, O., April 4.—A new kind of fast and dazzling play was promised for basketball today by coach Harold G. Olsen of Ohio State University, daddy of the new anti-stalling rule adopted by the National Association of Basketball Coaches Saturday.

"Basketball's dull and tedious slow-breaking offense is about to be replaced by the fastest-breaking attack we have seen," Olsen declared upon his return from the Chicago meeting where he was elected president of the association.

SCHEME EXPLAINED
His scheme which the national rules committee is expected to adopt unanimously, requires the team with the ball to advance it past the center of the floor within 10 seconds or surrender it to the opposition.

Speed will be assured and the stall will be eliminated by preventing the team with the ball from lingering and loafing in the back court, Olsen said.

"The time has come when basketball teams must quit playing take-away. It is so obvious that the real object of the game, which is to get the ball and try to score, has been overlooked by a great many teams in the past."

ALLEN APPROVED
Dr. Forrest (Phog) Allen of the University of Kansas, Dr. Walter

Meanwell of the University of Wisconsin and other of the game's authorities approved Olsen's plan at Chicago.

"The game will prove more popular for everybody because a fast-breaking offense will be substituted for a slow-breaking offense which is not interesting to watch or play," the Ohio coach said.

In the inventor's own words, here is how the rule would work: "A line would be drawn through the center of the floor and the team with the ball in its possession would give the ball up to the other team at the nearest sideline if it failed to advance past the line in 10 seconds."

"The team with the ball could not pass back over that line until it tried for a basket or until the ball changed hands."

"No audible count of the 10 seconds would be necessary. The referee would not even need a stop-watch. There is at present a rule requiring all free throws to be attempted within 10 seconds and the players, knowing they have a limited time, never lose their opportunity."

"The 'artilleryman's count,' by which you say 'One thousand' before the number you count off, to get the proper timing, would be accurate enough."

ACTION EXPECTED

"After a shot at the basket was attempted, it would be fair, we think, to allow time team with the ball to try a little maneuvering by working back into the back court, although once back there it would be allowed only 10 seconds to advance past the center again."

"There is the possibility that stalling would be tried in the front court, but we think this would be at a minimum."

"Football teams are required to run off plays in a limited space of time and we believe basketball teams must also, or the game will be ruined. I have experimented with the center line idea and am convinced it will work."

Any member of the family of Stanley Peters, 211 W. Water-st., is invited to be a guest of The Herald at the Grand Theatre. Call at this office for ticket.

REDS ARE HOME

CINCINNATI, April 4.—After weeks of training in the south, the Cincinnati Reds came back to their home grounds today, ready for an exhibition game before the home folks tomorrow with the New York Yankees.

The Reds finished their southern training yesterday by losing a 5 to 3 game to the Louisville Colonels at Louisville when young Walter Hülcher, right handed rookie, was smacked for three runs in the eighth inning. The rally cost the Reds their narrow lead.

Manager Dan Howley announced that Bennie Frey will hurl against the Yankees tomorrow.

Will Connie Remodel A's?

Speculation is rife in baseball circles as to the fate of the Philadelphia Athletics in 1932. Experts and fans are asking themselves whether the master of strategy, Connie Mack, will rely on the great machine that won three American League pennants in a row, or whether he'll dismantle it and introduce new blood. It is generally conceded that if Connie makes any changes in the team the four players above will be involved. Bob McNair (top, center), a rookie third baseman, may replace the veteran Jimmy Dykes (left) in that position. McNair has shown great form during training at St. Petersburg. Another possibility is the substitution of Ed Coleman (lower, center), who is also shining brilliantly in training, for Bing Miller (right), in right field. However, Connie Mack's intentions will have to remain a matter of conjecture until the season opens. No team in history has ever won 4 straight pennants, but Connie has a knack of shattering precedent.

SOX FANS WILL SEE NEW FACES SOON

When the umpire calls "Play Ball" at Comiskey Park in Chicago on April 12, these four newcomers will be in the lineup according to all indications. From left to right, they are: Howard Anderson, who came from St. Paul; Jack Hayes, who was obtained in a trade with Washington; Bruce Campbell, who came from semi-pro ranks; and Carey Selph who was with the Texas League. Anderson and Campbell are outfielders, Hayes and Selph play the infield.

"THAT LITTLE GAME" --- Busting Up a "Pat"

-THE DEUCES ARE WILD-

FORMER WESLEYAN MENTOR IS TAKEN

COLUMBUS, O., April 4.—Football hoops of other days were stunned today with the news of the unexpected death of C. Sumner Welch, 56, former coach and player at the Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware.

As preparations were made for his funeral here tomorrow, old-time varsity men recalled that Welch was considered Ohio Wesleyan's all-time fullback and that it was he who, as a member of Ohio Wesleyan's team, kicked the first goal from placement ever scored in Ohio.

Welch's playing days were from 1892 to 1896. Once he played against Fielding H. Yost, University of Michigan athletic director, a game that ended in a scoreless tie. After coaching at his alma mater he later coached the Ohio State university freshman squad. Welch was manager of a local realty company at the time of his death. Formerly he was superintendent of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. plant at Morgantown, W. Va.

O. S. U. WATCHING SOPH ATHLETES

COLUMBUS, April 4.—A number of sophomores will be watched closely when Ohio State University spring sport squads take the field shortly. In some cases, these newcomers must be depended on to fill gaps left in last year's ranks.

In polo, Pfaff Smith, Loveland, proved his caliber during the indoor season and is now high scorer of the Ohio State team. The Euckeye golf team, already strong, has received added power in George Berry, Newark, former central amateur champion, Perry Garver, Omaha, Neb., Nebraska intercollegiate champion, and William C. Robinson, Columbus, former Ohio Valley amateur champion.

Outstanding newcomers to the baseball team are headed by a pair of outfielders, Walter Dolce, Cleveland, and Martin Vidis, Youngstown. In track, however, the squad will be strengthened by John Wonsowicz, Gary, Ind., and Donald Bennett, Columbus. Wonsowicz was former national intercollegiate pole vault champion and Bennett was state interscholastic dash champion.

Other sophomore track aspirants include Earl Johnson, Prospect, weights, Walter Stapf, Bellevue dashes, Lawrence Biddle, Dayton, quarter mile; Sam Thorne, Mt. Clemens, Mich., quarter and half; George Arnold, Cleveland, in the distance events, and Carl Cramer, Dayton, football star javelin throw.

Breeze Doesn't Halt Golfers

Despite a cool breeze that swept the course throughout the day a large crowd of golfers trekked over the Pickaway Country club nine holes Sunday.

Except that the fairways were soggy in spots following the heavy rainfall last week the course was in excellent condition. The fairways promise to be better than they have been since the club was started. The greens appear in perfect condition and as soon as they are cut after undergoing considerable treatment this spring by Sam Lutz, greenskeeper, and his assistants, golf will resume in a big way.

Cups have already been inserted in the greens.

"AIR PILOT" TO FIGURE IN DERBY

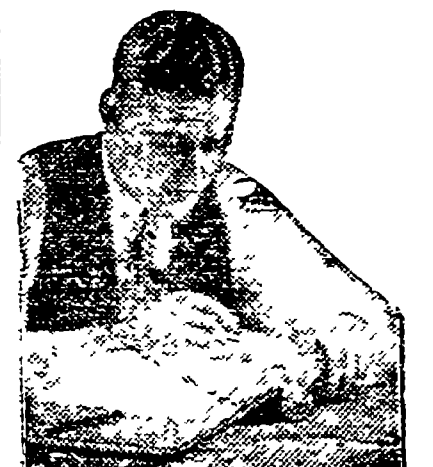

BALTIMORE, Md., April 4.—Just add the name of Walter J. Salmon's Air Pilot, son of Swift and Sure—Snow Capt., to the list of contenders for rich Preakness and Kentucky Derby honors. The smashing fine performance of the Merworth stud representative in the Capitol purse here on Saturday has added new supporters to his list of admirers.

It was not only the fact that the brown colt beat such formidable rivals as Phantom Legion, Mexico, Portam, Regula Redden, Indian Runner and Indicative which won him praise, but it was the way he accomplished this feat.

Air Pilot lowered a track record which has stood for more than 18 years. J. B. Harrell was credited with a mark of 1:01 2-5, made on Oct. 2, 1914, before Walter J. Salmon's great three-year-old started on Saturday.

The son of Swift and Sure cut the fraction off the mark. He accomplished this remarkable feat in as businesslike fashion as old timers have watched a three-year-old win at this time of the year. Many who saw the performance took tickets on the Merworth star in the Preakness and Kentucky Derby.

OVER WORKED NERVES

UP TO your ears in work—every nerve at high tension. No wonder you snap at the wife and bark at the children. Watch out! Overworked nerves may lead to Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Nervous Stomach and a host of other very smart disturbances. Why don't you try Dr. Miles' Effervescent Nerve Tablets? Just one in a half glass of water makes a pleasant, sparkling drink delightfully soothing to over-taxed nerves. Dr. Miles' Nerve is now made in two forms—Liquid and Effervescent Tablet. Both have the same soothing effect. Get it at your drug store.

FERRELL RIGHT

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—Pitcher Wes Ferrell of the Cleveland Indians is on the threshold of a great season. There were few doubters today.

In a pitching battle with Dazzy Vance, Ferrell came out a 3 to 2 winner over the Brooklyn Robins yesterday, granting three real hits and four scratches. He also succeeded in hurling the full nine innings.

Vance pitched the more spectacular game, but only worked four innings, holding the Tribe hitless during that period and fanning Porter, Averill, Morgan, Kamm and Sewell. Phelps and Mattingly followed him.

KING CITY, Cal.—A "concentrated drive on overproduction and low prices by the California bean industry may result from a conference of leading growers and buyers to be held here. Because of excess production prices for some varieties have been reduced more than 50 per cent.

IL DUCE ISSUES EDICT

ROME—For some years past many members of the Fascist Party have omitted to wear the little badge, with its flag and the Fascist emblem, a bundle of lictors' rods tied up with an axe. From now on, Premier Mussolini says, all members of the party must wear it. Local "Consuls" have to see the order is carried out. Fines will be imposed on those who offend in this respect.

Have You, The "Can't Afford It" Habit?

THE use of that phrase does not suggest the inability to buy so much as the desire to practice rigid economy . . . to save . . . to deny yourself needed and necessary commodities.

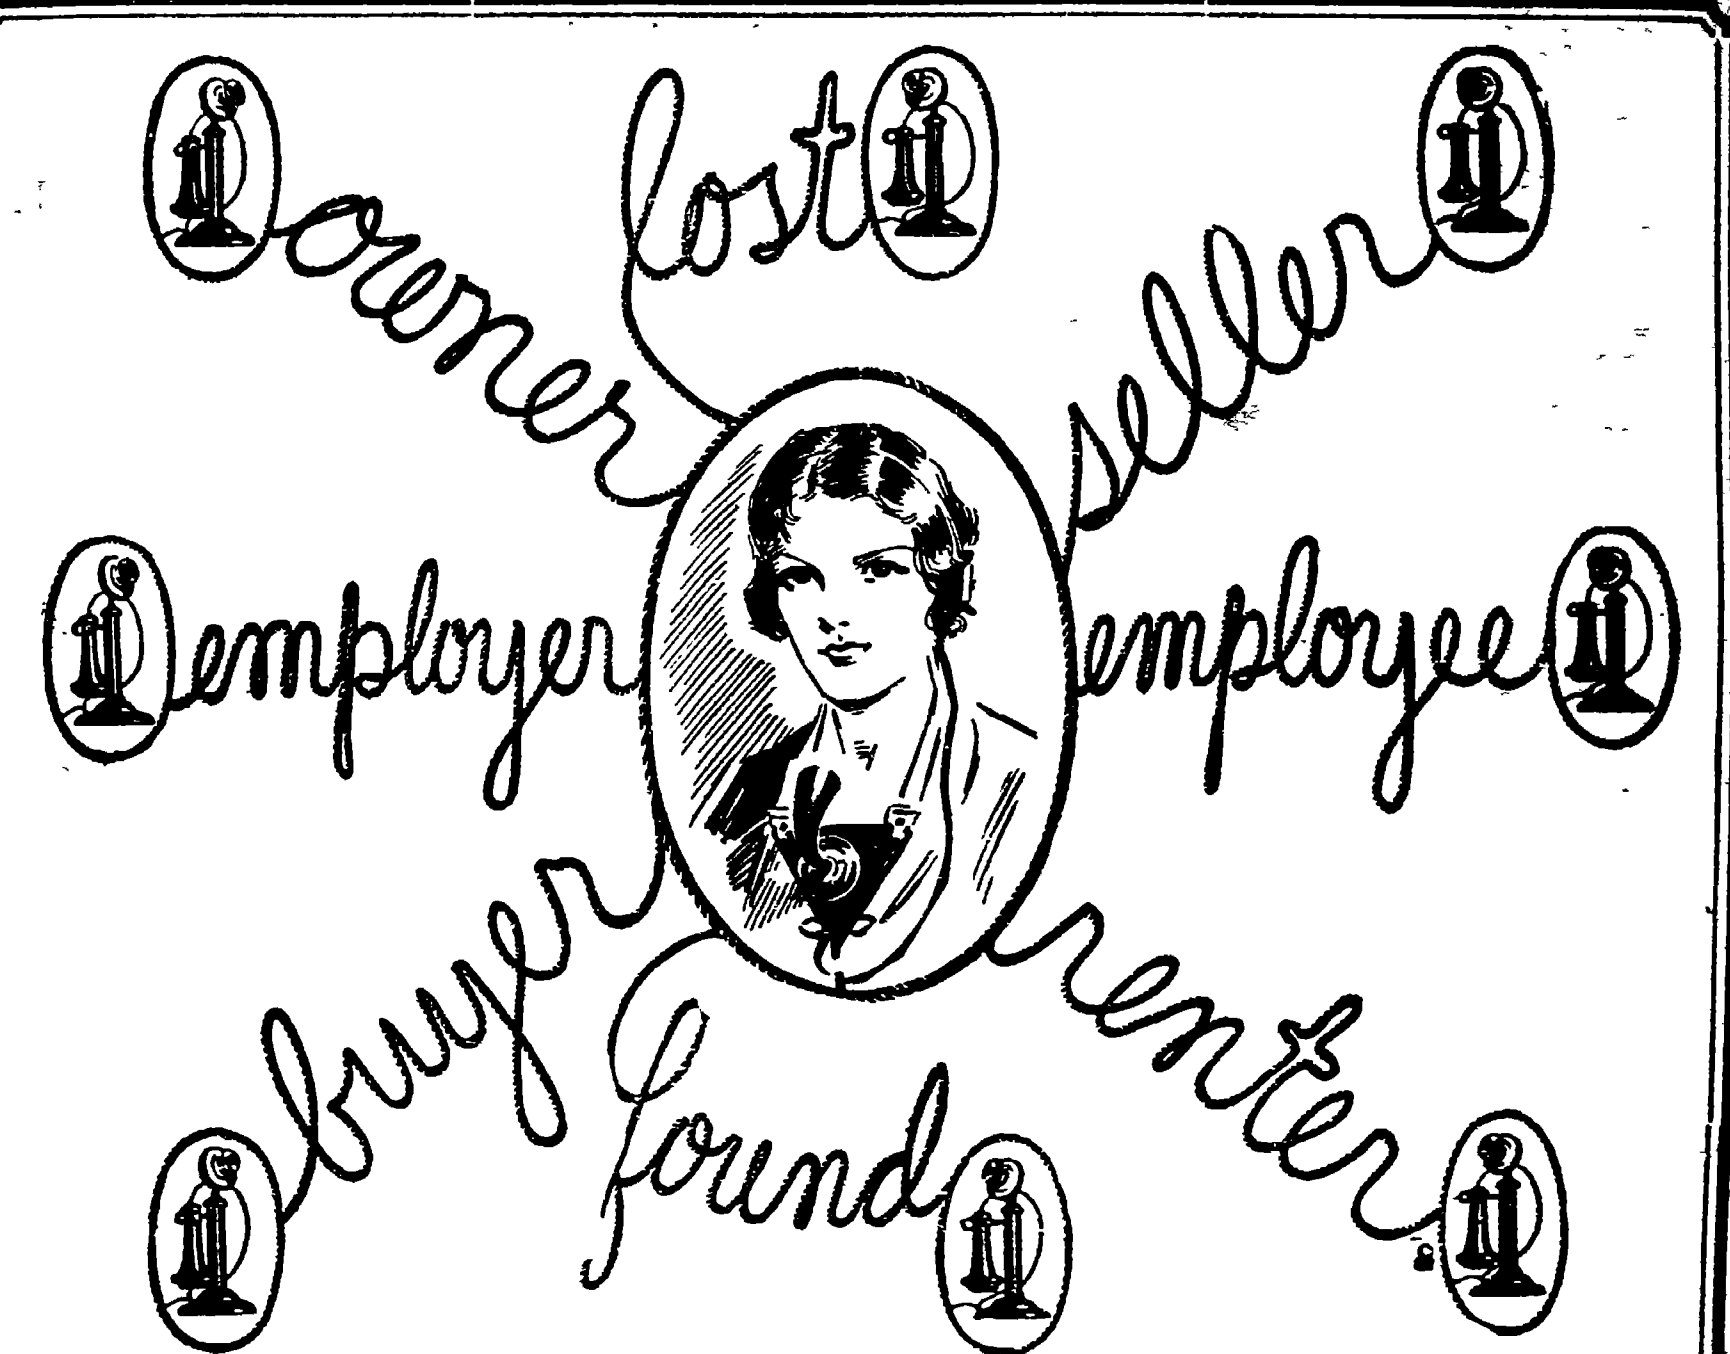

But Man, oh Man, and you, too, Madam, how better and more effectively can you practice economy and thrift than to buy when prices are at their lowest ebb in years?

How more certainly can you insure economy than to replace worn out-of-date furniture than when new is selling for one-third of what it sold for 15 years ago? Or to stock up on food products when they are 40% less than at any time since the war? Or clothing when $53 today will buy you what you paid $100 for in 1912?

What you really cannot afford to do is not buy because you cannot afford to miss today's low levels . . . prices that are an actual boon to reduced incomes . . . to the practice of sensible, far-sighted economy.

Grab It—Hold It

A GREAT many of our readers know Dick, only that it is not his real name. He is a bright-eyed youngster who plays hard every day.

A few days ago we watched him and his playmates having a game of baseball. The score at the time we stopped to look is an unimportant detail. Dick's eyes were never off the rapidly moving sphere. Suddenly a hard and fast fly was batted to his field. Out in this field was a great puddle of muddy water, left by a recent rain, and the ball went straight for that puddle. And Dick went straight for the ball. Perhaps he saw the puddle—at least he knew it was there—but his eyes were on the ball. As the ball shot for the ground Dick leaped into the air, caught the ball, and—splash! he went flat in the dirty hole. But the hand that had nailed the fly never touched the ground. He waded out, covered with mud and soaked to the hide, two facts of which he seemed unaware, because he had caught the fly—and he held it.

Some boys would have started for the ball and stopped at the edge of the puddle. Some others would have lost it when they fell. Dick held on.

That particular ball game soon will be a forgotten affair, or at the best only a memory. But we can picture Dick when he gets into the real game of life, as being classed among the star players. He will not look for the little unpleasant things but will hurl himself at the ball and hold on for dear life. He may fall in the mud—he may even have to be fished out—but when he comes to the top, in his hand you will see the ball.

One great affliction of so many of our boys is the tendency to first look for the puddle instead of the ball. And by the time we have figured out every little chance against a successful catch, the ball is gone.

When the ball of life is batted into your field, grab it. Don't fumble it—hold it.

Province of a Newspaper
It would be comical, were it not somewhat pathetic, the way newspaper offices are besieged every day by their friends, urging them to "roast" this and that; to "see to it" that this and that is corrected; to have this and that done in the city or county; to start this and that kind of movement to correct evils in the state government; to have friends actually appear to believe that it is the newspaper's business to handle all these affairs.

But a self-respecting newspaper, though ready and willing to carry all reasonable responsibility, must remind its readers that they—the people—are the authority upon whom the responsibility for the present state of affairs, local, state and national.

A self-respecting newspaper tries to report the news of what actually happens not what it might wish had happened. The relation of a self-respecting newspaper to the general public is not always understood. It is the duty of a newspaper to be in a position to support any good act and criticize any bad act of public policy.

This relationship cannot exist where favors are asked and granted. Honesty is the only policy for a newspaper.

Marbles and Spring
THERE is a time for all things and this happens to be the time for marbles.

One of the positive signs of spring is the advent of the marble season. No sooner does the warm spring sun melt late winter's snow from pavements and sidewalks than there appears on them myriads of small, round, smooth, shiny objects which look like marbles and which are in fact marbles.

"Knuckle down," "Trade you two shots for a glassy," "Your shot," now become the language of youth, and the tell-tale signs of the season are bulging pockets, cardboard boxes filled with something that rattles suspiciously and having a hole in the top through which a marble might be dropped, and the clatter and roll of marbles on school room floors as sorely strained pants' pockets let go.

In his game is the boy "the father of the man." The marbles of youth prepare the way for the tennis, billiards, golf and other sports and pastimes of maturity. Marbles is the kindergarten of good sportsmanship.

One wonders if there is a normal boy today who does not feel the irresistible urge to play marbles or a normal man who did not as a boy "shoot" the little sphere of colored glass and clay. It is inseparable from the boy's life, the marbles of youth, that prepare the way for the boy's life, that prepare the way for the boy's life, that prepare the way for the boy's life.

"The GAY BANDIT of the BORDER"

by TOM GILL

COPYRIGHT 1931 BY INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE CO., INC. — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Harkness, a respected rancher in the Mexican border town of Verdi, is "El Coyote," the masked bandit and bitter enemy of Paco Morales, self-appointed ruler of the border country. "El Coyote's" identity is known only to Ann Reed, an entertainer at a notorious resort. She is in love with him and acts as his spy. "El Coyote" wreaks vengeance on Morales for his unjust treatment of the ranchers. There is a high price on "El Coyote's" head, but all search has proved futile. Bob's foreman and friend, Ted Radcliffe, is in love with Adela, the Spaniard's beautiful niece. Jito, Morales' ward, is jealous of Ted. Major Blount of the U. S. Cavalry summons Bob and Ted to his headquarters to hear one of "El Coyote's" lieutenants reveal his identity. Bob goes outside. Two shots ring out. Bob returns and, shortly after, the informer is carried in, mortally wounded. He dies without a word. On the way home, Bob collapses from a wound in his side. Ted realizes the truth. Bob sends for Ann. Against Bob's wishes, Ted calls in Dr. Price and swears him to secrecy. Ann and Ted keep constant vigil over Bob.

CHAPTER XXXIX

He hurried into Bob's room. The girl was still sitting by the bed. As he entered she smiled, the happiest smile he had yet seen on her white face.

"He woke up once and knew me. I leaned over and kissed him and he fell asleep again. He's been sleeping ever since. I haven't dared stir. And I'm too stiff to move."

Ted put his arms about her and raised her. "It's bad for you, little girl," he said, and obediently she left him.

Remembering Price's words, Ted poured a few drops of brandy between the man's lips. His face was cooler. The deadly pallor had gone. For a time Ted waited, then walked to the window. At last, conscious of eyes upon him, he turned toward the bed, and with a wild thrill of joy, found the gray eyes of Don Bob open and the lips faintly smiling.

"Thank God!" The words burst from him.

Bob moistened his lips. "Something tells me," he said in a weak whisper, "you've been feeding the patient brandy." He motioned the boy nearer. "Did anyone see us that night?"

"Not one."

"Good."

"But you're not to talk," Ted warned.

"Oh, the devil I'm not." And a moment later Bob had fallen asleep. But it was not until two days afterward that Price pronounced Bob out of danger.

"And it's only because of those two kids," the gruff old fellow had told him, "that your homely, grinning self is still with us."

For a time the doctor hesitated, then blurted out at last. "Give it up, Bob. You can't buck all the powers of northern Mexico. As for Morales, the man has a crack in his brain that will never let him change."

Weakly, Bob smiled up, but the old, unquenchable fire glowed in his gray eyes. "I couldn't give it up—I wouldn't know how to give it up. These people out there are looking to me to save them—to make free men of them. When I've done that, I'll give it up—not before."

Price nodded. "You know what I think. I think you're one of destiny's pawns. I think both you and Morales stand for forces in the world that must always be at war. The forces of despotism and freedom. And you can't help being enemies any more than a rattler and a bull snake. Well, I suppose my job is to nurse you back into shape until you can get hell shot out of you again. Meanwhile, I'm telling everyone that

"I suppose my job is to nurse you back into shape until you can get hell shot out of you again," said Price.

you're enjoying a strained back. See you tomorrow."

That night and each following night a rider came to Bob's window and sat there silently in the starlight until Ted came outside. Always the same grizzled Mexican, and always he asked the same question.

"El señor?"

And each night Ted answered, "Buena," wondering as the man rode away by what telepathy he had known of Bob's danger.

So for a week Ted took full charge on Bob's ranch, riding the range, working out with the cowboys, herding the cattle on both sides of the border line. One evening as he came back dusty and tired, Bob looked up at him with an affectionate smile.

"Remember I once told you I needed you more than you told me?" he asked. "Without you, old fellow, I'd be lost in every way."

And it was that same evening he talked for the first time of the night that for him had so nearly been the end of all things.

It was a moment both had dreaded and postponed. Yet both men knew that the secret of El Coyote had to be faced. Not for always could they share such knowledge in silence, and so, as Bob lay on his pillow that night in early spring, he considered for a while how best to begin. They were alone, for the girl had returned to Mendoza's.

Bob asked for a cigarette, and after a puff shook his head. "Tastes just like an inner tube," he complained, and Ted laid it aside.

Bob watched the blue smoke curl upward on the quiet air.

"I suppose," he said at length, "you'd like to know just what happened outside the major's tent that memorable evening?" For a moment he frowned in reminiscence. "A devilish close squeak. I'll never be a really successful bad man until I lose all faith in humans. Almost I have, but not quite—not enough. And I may get my come time. That beast Antonio was selling my life to Blount. I never suspected the fellow. Not once. I had saved his skin only two years ago, with some little danger and effort. He was very grateful then, and he swore with many fine Spanish oaths he would serve me always. For two years he did serve me. And then—Bob stirred restlessly—"then, I suppose, came the old itch for gold. It was too strong for that poon whose hide I had preserved. Let that go."

"When Blount told us the man's name it gave me a hint as to the direction Antonio might be coming from. That, too, was a long chance. It was an evening of long chances. Almost I was too late. When I went outside I hurried toward the troopers' line. In the darkness it was easy to slip through, but it wasn't a minute before I heard a horseman coming from the south. I couldn't be sure it was Antonio until he was upon me. I think he recognized me first. He must have been carrying his revolver ready, in the saddle. At any rate, he fired a second ahead of me, and I dropped him from his horse. Then I turned, ran back, and sauntered into the major's tent with a stinging pain in my side and a curiosity as to how long I could stand."

For a time they sat in silence, then at last Bob asked, "Was it a shock, old fellow, when you learned I was El Coyote?"

"I must have been too busy thinking how to get you home—the rest didn't seem to make much difference. And yet—Ted hesitated—"now that I do know, how did it all come about?"

Bob's face, still gaunt and wasted, turned toward the window. At length, in that low, languid voice, he began. "To tell how Don Bob became El Coyote—I wonder if I know myself. It's all part of a tale that goes to make up the strange thing we call a man's life. And that tale no matter how hard we try, must always remain a secret between ourselves and whatever God exists. I think, Ted, some of us are born rebels and some are made rebels by old stepmother life. To me it may have come in both those ways. But always, from the very first, that old stepmother has cuffed me about. Well, it may have done me good. Certainly it made me take on a kind of armor. It made me hard, too. Perhaps too hard. And yet I loved life."

Outside the night wind rustled among the tall eucalyptuses. Flames crackled in the fireplace across the room. Bob's gray eyes had grown tender with the memories of day, and faces long past.

POLICE CATCH

Suspected of having perpetrated some 30 bank holdups in four states, this self-styled "lone wolf" of banditry was captured Friday night by sheer inadvertence.

His romantic proclivities led him into the hands of the authorities. Living in elaborate style at South Bend, Ind., Loftus had been courted by Miss Evelyn P. Kizer in Mishawaka, a South Bend suburb. But, he also began lavishing unworldly

Authorities said that Loftus' police record shows he served a four-year term at Leavenworth penitentiary on a Mann act conviction growing out of his desertion of a bigamous wife in Tucson, Ariz.

At that time, according to police records, Loftus fled to California with another woman. Official investigators reported that some of the bank robberies, credited to Loftus, were committed in Los Angeles, Cincinnati, Delavan, Wis., and numerous small towns of Illinois and California. The smooth-spoken "lone wolf" is accused of having amassed an aggregate loot of more than $250,000, of which he is said to have spent all but $7,000 in elaborate living.

MOTHER SLAYS TWO, SUICIDES

Wife of Noted Attorney, Crazy, Commits Act in New York Home Today.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., April 4.—Mrs. Raymond B. Fosdick, wife of a noted New York attorney, shot and killed herself and her two children, Susan, 15, and Raymond B. Fosdick, Jr., 9, in her pretentious home here today.

Mrs. Fosdick had been undergoing treatment for mental ailment. She had been suffering from nervous disorder.

Fosdick who is a brother of the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick of New York City, one of the foremost clergymen of the United States, was proscribed by the tragedy.

The children were home on their Easter vacation. The girl had been attending private school in Philadelphia and Raymond was a student at Lake Placid, N. Y. They were asleep this morning when their mother left her bedroom without awakening her husband and found an old revolver which it was believed had been safely hidden.

Mrs. Fosdick went first to the bedroom of her daughter. She shot the child through the head. Then she rushed to Raymond's room and killed him in the same manner.

She pressed the weapon to her heart and fired just as Fosdick awoke and rushed into the room.

SUGGESTS TESTED VEGETABLE SEEDS

Buying vegetable seeds according to the results of actual tests is likely to prove more profitable and less disappointing than purchasing them from the superlatives so often found about alluring pictures in annual seed catalogs, says H. D. Brown, professor of vegetables gardening at the Ohio State University.

Though it is true that honest seedsmen often make a special effort to provide adequate illustrations and descriptive material for their best varieties of vegetable, it is a wise plan to regard with suspicion any seedsmen who describes practically all his varieties in glowing terms. As a matter of fact, the best varieties of vegetables usually are limited to from one to five or six for each vegetable.

Some very definite recommendations regarding what varieties to choose, he points out, can be made as a result of numerous tests conducted by the state university and the agricultural experiment stations. A few of the recommended varieties of important vegetables are:

Early potatoes: Irish Cobbler or Early Ohio; late potatoes: Russet Rural; Asparagus: Mary Washington; Beets: Detroit Dark Red; Carrots: Nantes, Chantenay, Cumber; Early White Spine (for slicing); Boston Pickling (for pickling); Eggplant: Black Beauty;

St. John's Church of Richmond, Virginia

Patrick Henry made his impassioned plea for "Liberty or Death" Washington heard that speech. It is not on record that he made comment, but it created a deep impression as did Henry's speech in the "Persons Cause," at Hanover, for these addresses involved fundamental principles that presaged trouble in the future.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S TRAVELS

THE high tide of friendship between England and the Colonies was reached in 1703. In this quiet simple court house in Hanover, Virginia, located a few miles east of Ashland, the latter on U.S. Route 1, was expressed the first definite opposition to the King. Patrick Henry made his first great speech in this case known as the Parsons Cause.

REV. EICHINGER SPEAKS AT TREE-PLANTING
Rev. C. H. Eichinger was the speaker for the special tree-planting program at Pickaway-twp school Friday at one o'clock. The program and the planting were arranged by Mr. Meyer representing the high school and Mrs. Johnson representing the elementary school. Through special arrangement with the state archaeological society an offspring of our own famous Logan Elm was planted with appropriate ceremonies and dedicated to the memory of George Washington.

All of the pupils and teachers formed in ranks eight abreast north of the building promptly at one o'clock and marched to the designated place led by our own Logan Elm Girl Scout troop carrying the flag. A rectangle was formed by the girl scouts on the west by pupils and teachers on the north and south, by the speakers on the east and all stood at attention while they sang America. This was followed by the invocation. Supt. Seitz then presented the tree to the school and community, and it was accepted for the board of education by Shirley Dreishach, president. Joyce Kilmer's "Trees" was then sung by a quartet of teachers, and this was followed by Rev. Eichinger's excellent address, which was well received and attentively listened to in spite of a raw wind and the absence of the sun, which at that time was shut out by a dense blanket of clouds.

The entire ceremony was very impressive and will live long in the memories of those who were present. The tree we hope, will emulate the example of its parent and stand for many years as a reminder to this and coming generations of the noble Logan and the great Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—President Hoover addressed a "surprise" economy message to Congress today demanding still more drastic reductions in expenditures. He proposed that representative be delegated by both Houses to meet with his representatives in framing a "complete national program of economy" for action at this session of Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—President Hoover's appeal to Congress to create a commission to balance the budget, this afternoon drew a sharp rebuke from Senator Joe P. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader of the senate. Robinson charged the president was "trying to shift the responsibility that belongs to him" to the backs of Congress. He said the creation of a commission would prove unsatisfactory and would delay the balancing of the budget.
